

THE WAYS OF WOMEN.

Matters of Interest to the Intelligence of the Fairer Sex.

HINTS, SUGGESTIONS AND FANCIES.

How Some Girls Leave Their Rooms After Their Toilets Are Made—The Age to Marry—Season Notes of Dainty Fashionable Attire—Gossip About Women of Note.

"I do hope mother will not take any one up to my room while I am out," said a young girl at a lawn party to a group of friends, who were sipping tea and watching a game of progressive tennis from under the shade of a branching elm. "It looks as though a hurricane had struck it, for I was in such a hurry that I hadn't time to fix it up one bit and I just left things where they fell when I was through using them."

A half hour later a glimpse at that self-same room, which its owner laughingly declared she didn't mind having us see, as we weren't a bit "fussy," revealed a chaos of feminine fripperies that even staggered a woman not painfully neat herself, for of all the untidy places that we had ever entered this dainty room was the most of a hodge-podge from which all semblance of order had departed. The pretty dressing table was left with perfume bottles unstoppered, a powder puff was on the floor and enough powder to supply the troops at Buffalo rested on the satin ribbons of the cushion and mats, and also covered the face of the little silver clock ticking away behind the white mask, and even decked the oval mirror at the back. Hairpins and curling tongs fraternized in Bohemian untidiness with a brush and comb that gave very positive evidences of their recent use.

In the middle of the floor were the gown and silk petticoat worn in the morning, the bodice was thrown over the foot of the bed and shoes and stockings seemed to be everywhere. The closet door stood open, revealing a hat box on the crowded shelf with its cover half open, and a feather and ribbon streamer straggling out over the gowns below. Gloves and purse were on the mantel, and even the little writing desk had its unusual equipment of a feather box and cast-off jacket. "It's awful, isn't it?" laughed the cause of all this disorder, "but positively I was in such a rush I had to leave things pell mell or be late."

Now wouldn't it have been just as easy to take perhaps two or three steps more and hang up the discarded garments, place the hat box cover on as it should be, leave the dressing table tidy and have no fear of outsiders catching a glimpse of a room that would give them a poor opinion of its inmate. Orderliness is just as easy to acquire as untidiness and facilitates where the other retards. Undoubtedly the shoes, skirts and etcetera left where she had taken them off were many times in her way in the hasty preparations that necessitated journeys all about the little higgledy piggledy room. Order is heaven's first law, and though we abominate fussiness, still a place for everything and everything in its place makes it easier to get ready to either stay at home or go away and is not nearly so hard when once the habit is acquired as to have to go through a general straightening up every time one gets back from a hasty leavetaking of our own apartments.

THE AGE TO MARRY.

It Depends Largely on the Parents or Guardians to Say.

There can never be any definite period set when men and women should marry, as it depends largely on circumstances and the different views of the parents and guardians interested in the welfare of the young couple. Yet there are certain absolute laws that should be fulfilled before marriage is thought of, yet which are passed over by the thoughtless ones with too frequently very disastrous results. With a girl, it goes almost without saying, that she ought to have at least two years of social life after she leaves school before plunging into matrimony with all its attendant joys and cares.

These years of contact with the world will reveal to her undeveloped mind much that she should know, but which she can in no other way obtain, besides giving her opportunities of meeting and judging many men instead of marrying right out of school the first one who comes along and who may in future years prove to be entirely the wrong man when she meets others more congenial, with whom he so poorly compares. A man should never even think of marriage until he is fairly settled in life and able to take good care of the woman who intrusts her life to his keeping. He should be content to sow the entire crop of wild oats before matrimony claims him for its own, as he will be responsible for many a heartache if he is not willing to settle down once he becomes a Benedict.

Of course, there are many men more settled at twenty than others at forty, but the average man cannot practically be said to have attained manhood in its true sense until he has reached the age of thirty. Of course, with a girl it remains with her parents or guardians to decide if she should marry if she is less than twenty-one years of age, and after that time her own heart and good judgment will prove the very best mentors in a matter that will either make or mar her future life.

WOMEN OF NOTE.

Whisperings of the Dolays of Famous Fair Ones.

Miss Lily E. Benn, who about three years ago took up her residence in London, has interested herself greatly in the condition of the children and young girls of the East End, and has started sewing classes for girls between the ages of 9 and 13. She provides the material, pays for each garment made, and the money thus earned by the girls Miss Benn keeps for them, giving them 2d in the shilling interest as an encouragement for saving and allowing them to take out the money when required for a useful purpose.

Mrs. Lena Stitt, of Brooklyn, has patented an ingenious water-proof cloak which promises to excel any water-proof garment ever offered to the members of her sex. The skirt is made double the length from the knees downward and is finished at the bottom with gored and divided bloomer fashion, in order to have it drawn up about the knees of the wearer, and by falling in natural folds it encases the skirt in a bag. The garment was suggested to the clever inventor by observing the creeping skirt worn by infants.

Mrs. Ayers, the wealthy New York widow, has had her portrait painted by Charles Duran, and the probabilities are that Mrs. Ayers now regrets it very much. The lady is seated on a sort of a throne, covered with antique tapestry. She is robed in heavy velvet of an indescribable hue, and a heavy purple mantle, bordered with Russian sable, falls from her shoulders. Velvet shoes are on her feet, and the artist's love of color is further illustrated by the revealing of a bright red pair of stockings. The English papers allude to the picture as "Queen Crusus," and criticize Duran for representing the estimable Mrs. Ayers in this fashion, and missing all her sweet and womanly characteristics.

FADS AND FANCIES.

Mid-Season Notes of Dainty Fashionable Attire.

The "stocking sachet" is the latest in the list of scented toilet accessories. It is quite a large silk bag, lined with quilted satin and having the odoriferous powder scattered with liberal hand between the lining and the silk. It is hung in the wardrobe and receives the stockings as they come up from the wash and before they have gone to the mender.

Laces that are rather coarse in effect, indeed those that look almost like embroidery, are fancied on cotton gowns for shoulder capes, cuffs, panels and foot trimmings. The finer laces, those that so admirably make jabots and frills, are only liked for gowns that are counted somewhat elaborate or are intended for evening wear.

For ruchings of silk, which act as a foot fill upon the summer gowns, sandal and rose pink is an exquisite combination. The effect is very pretty when worn at the bottom of a black grenadine.

Gold and silver shoe buttons are one of the extravagances of the summer belle. They are put on with a patent fastener, and can be easily made to do duty on several pairs of shoes.

Triple ruffles are around the upper part of sleeves of wool gowns, giving a fuller effect from armhole to elbow than the Russian over sleeve.

Spangled net veils have come to the fore again, and are particularly becoming, but most trying to the eyesight.

STATE POLITICAL NOTES.

The Spirit of the West Virginia Press Disclosed.

We wish every self-respecting, law-abiding voter would compare the records of the two gubernatorial candidates. Hon. T. E. Davis, the Republican candidate, is and always has been, a high-toned, honorable gentleman. He was a brave soldier in the war, and has always been a peaceable, gentlemanly man, an active business man, setting in all respects such an example as it would be well for all young men to follow. His competitor [MacCorkle] makes his first public appearance as a bully, making a personal attack upon a man much smaller and weaker than himself, but keeping himself safely out of sight when he knows that the man he has so brutally attacked had prepared himself for self defense. His next performance was to attack and brutally beat a Republican editor who had expressed a somewhat unfavorable opinion of his conduct in defending the memory of Jeff Davis. On another occasion he is reported to have struck down the mayor of Charleston, a man much older than himself. What he may be at home and on ordinary occasions we do not know. These three are his public appearances. Do they commend him to the voters of a civilized state for the dignified and important office of governor?—Keyser Echo.

Jacob S. Hyer, the Republican nominee for auditor, is a plain, unassuming business man, yet his strength in the convention demonstrated him to be one of the most popular men in West Virginia. This place was the one most hotly contested for, and yet he won it easily against able and prominent opponents. He started in life in Braxton county with nothing but his native strength, ability and industry, but by his close attention to business and unwavering honesty he has succeeded so well that he now superintends a large mercantile, farming and lumber business. He has taken care of his own business interests in the best guarantee in the world that he will prove a faithful guardian of the people's money.—The Pathfinder.

The Democracy of this senatorial district held their convention at Littleton, Wetzel county, on Tuesday, and the Hon. Charles E. Wells, of this county, was declared the nominee. Capt. W. B. Sine, of Mannington, was his competitor. Mr. Wells has been twice elected to the house of delegates. He has always been a Democratic wheelhorse, but when last before the people he did not get the full support of his party, having run behind his ticket, and if he is as unfortunate this fall, he is sure to be our next. Indeed, we think Mr. Wells is beaten at the start. But his defeat depends a great deal upon who is nominated against him. The Mannington convention can name a man who could win easily.—Fairmount West Virginian.

It is said by the Democrats that Mr. Davis, once candidate for governor, is no orator. Well, we admit that when it comes to making a windy, bombastic speech, full of "hifalutin" and moonshine, there are a score of young fellows in both parties who can beat him out of sight. But when he wants to make people understand his views on any public question and his reason for holding those views, making a convincing, sensible talk that will influence sensible people, he can do himself and his party credit every time. No, he may be no orator, but he knows something, and knows he knows it, and knows how he knows it, and can make people understand all about it.—Mountain Echo.

It behooves us as Republicans in West Virginia, to work hard if we hope for success. We must get out our full vote. In Republican counties we must make the majorities as large as possible, and in Democratic counties we must cut down to the lowest possible notch. So, no matter whether we need every vote in a county to elect the county officers, nor whether the Democratic majority is so great that there is no possible hope of electing a single county officer, yet it is of the greatest importance that we cast every Republican vote in the state. If we do so we will be victorious.—Tyler County Star.

Hon. Edward P. Rucker is making the most vigorous and effective campaign that has ever been made in the Third district. He is carrying the truths of protection into every county and his eloquence and logic are awakening the people to their interest. We predict that the Third district will roll up such a majority for Rucker and protection that Johnny and his jug will be set adrift on salt water without so much as an oarman.—Branwell Monitor.

The enthusiastic reception tendered Hon. S. B. Elkins at the Huntington convention portrayed the fact that his efforts to advance the industrial interests of West Virginia are appreciated by the Republicans of this state.—Inter-Mountain.

Capt. A. B. Doyner will represent this district in the next Congress. Quite a difference between him and John Oh. Doyner is in favor of protection to West Virginia homes and manufactures, while Pendleton is in favor of free trade and opposed to the best interests of our state.—Glenville Pathfinder.

Senator Faulkner manipulated the state convention in the interests of the railroad corporations through MacCorkle, the corporation candidate. It is charged by the Bennett men, with good show of reason, that every railroad in West Virginia was in favor of the nomination of Mr. MacCorkle, who is himself connected with railroad interests. The Chiltons, the Faulkners, the Camdens, John T. McGraw, H. C. Sims, and others connected with big railroad corporations were all for MacCorkle, and it was through their influence that Bennett was defeated and a railroad tool nominated.—Parkersburg Journal.

This is the description given of themselves by the employees of the Homestead Iron works. "The employees in the mill of Messrs. Carnegie, Phipps & Co. at Homestead have built there a town, with its homes, its school and its churches; with for many years been faithful co-workers with the company in the business, and have invested thousands of dollars of their savings in the said mills." Just put next to this description of the free-trade English iron workers and you will have the difference between protected and free trade laborers.—Braxton Central.

Bill MacCorkle's soothing utterances on the labor question does not soothe the Ansted miners whom Bill wanted to soothe with the gatling gun a few years ago. Bill was not a soldier, didn't even belong to a military company, but he volunteered to go and was put in charge of the gatling gun. All in the interest of organized labor—don't yer know.—Charleston Republican.

The people along the line of the Elk River railroad will remember W. A. MacCorkle, the candidate for governor on the Democratic ticket, by reason of his connection with the assessment of their damages against the Charleston, Clendenin & Sutton railroad, Retribution, though often slow, comes with full force in due time. November 8 is the time.—West Virginia Republican.

Now is the time for young West Virginia Democrats to get in out of the wet and under the Republican canvass. Come under, boys, and cast your vote where it will not be lost. * * * Oh, yes, we know our votes were not counted four years ago, but we know what your honest opinion about it is, so come in and vote with your conscience.—Wetzel Republican.

The attention of Hon. John J. Davis being called by us to a dispatch in the Cincinnati Post of the 23d inst., sent from this place and stating that Mr. Davis would be announced this week as a candidate for the U. S. Senate, he said to us, that as far as any knowledge or pronouncement on his part was concerned, the statement was a canard.—Clarkburg News (Dem.).

The Baltimore Sun, which understands the Democratic situation in this state, concedes it to the Republicans and consoles its readers with the assertion that "Cleveland can be elected without West Virginia."—Preston County Journal.

Stevenson and Organized Labor.

On page 393 of the report of the state inspector of mines for the Bloomington district, we find the following paragraph under the heading of "strikes": "There have been only two strikes in this district during the last year. The first was by the miners employed by the McLean County Coal Company at Bloomington. The company having discharged a few of their employees for taking a leading part in forming a union, the miners as a body came out on a strike to have those who had thus been discharged reinstated." This is the coal company of which Adlai E. Stevenson, the tail-end of the free trade tick, is president. Yet this same Stevenson, coming to the city of New York to be notified of his nomination, was one of the loudest howlers against "the tariff as a cause of strikes."

We could not make this offer did we not know that Dr. King's New Discovery could be relied on. It never disappoints. Trial bottle free at the Logan Drug Co.'s drug store. Large size 60c. and $1.

An Epidemic of Bloody Flux.

Last summer the flux raged here to a fearful extent. About five miles north of here at the Whiteside graveyard there were five victims of this dreadful disease buried in one day. The doctors could do nothing with the disease. When my family was taken, I went to Walter Brothers, of Walpersburg, and told them the situation. They said give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy; that they had sent out several hundred bottles into the infected district and "every day we hear how this medicine is curing them. So far we have not heard of its failing in a single instance." I went to giving it and could soon see the good effects and a cure was the result. Anyone in doubt about these facts may write to me—I.
